

Working effectively with gang-affected young women

Three-day professional development for professionals with experience of working with vulnerable adolescents including GAYW

An intensive and practical three-day training programme that improves the skills of practitioners so they are more able and confident to support gang-affected young women (GAYW). Co-delivered by Abianda Young Trainers, senior Abianda specialists and our Solution Focused Therapist.

In addition to our one-day Girls and Gangs training content, professionals will gain:

- o Understanding the need for a strengths and participatory response to gang-affected young women and the associated vulnerabilities;
- o Understanding the need for a contextualised safeguarding approach in order to respond to the realities and risk that young women experience as adolescents in various contexts;
- o Understand and practice the delivery of Abianda's structured programme of work for gang-affected young women;
- o Understand theory, techniques and tools (including solution focused therapy) from the Abianda model that can be used straight away in their day-to-day practice.

“Excellent training, informative, creative, participatory, young person focussed”

“I've never been on a more practical training! I'm taking so many things back to change the way I practise.”
